BRING YOUR BIBLE TO SCHOOL DAY™

WHAT DO YOU THINK?

What if there is a God who cares so much about each of us that He gave us a personal message of hope?

I brought my Bible to school with me today because I believe that this is true—that God does exist, that He loves us, and that He wants to have a relationship with us. I believe that this message is found in the Bible, which talks about how God sent His son, Jesus Christ, to this earth to give His life for people like you and me.

I also believe that one of the main things that makes our country great is the constitutional freedom we have to voluntarily talk about God. That's why I'm participating in "Bring Your Bible to School Day"—because I want to celebrate our religious freedom!

One-Half Million U.S. Public School Students Expected to Participate in #BringYourBible to School Oct. 5

Colorado Springs, Colo. – About 500,000 public school students from all 50 states, will join the Bring Your Bible to School movement on Thursday, Oct. 5, by participating in the fourth annual student-led religious freedom event.

Kids and teens will also be on social media using #BringYourBible to explain why they're taking part in this day: to share the hope and love they receive from reading their Bibles, and to let others know their faith is part of who they are.

Refusing to be silenced

Many Christian students feel there's an unspoken pressure to stay silent about their faith. Others report overt efforts to silence them from presenting their Bible-based viewpoints in class discussions or in assignments. Yet, the First Amendment recognizes the rights of students to talk about their faith and read their Bibles outside of classroom time.

"Over the years we've heard from many kids and teens who want to meaningfully engage in conversations with peers to share their perspective on important issues," said Focus on the Family President Jim Daly. "The good news is – they can. The Constitution recognizes students' rights to share their biblical viewpoints in a way that doesn't disturb instruction time, and to exercise their faith at school. 'Bring Your Bible to School Day' celebrates these rights and gives Christian students a chance to share a bit about their faith, which is an important part of who they are."

Help from high places

"Bring Your Bible to School Day" has grown exponentially since it first started in 2014 with 8,000 students to an estimated 356,000 students last year. It's also garnered the attention of influential Christian influencers like the award-winning band Newsboys and Sadie Robertson of Duck Dynasty fame.

WIN A TRIP
TO SEE THE NEWSBOYS IN CONCERT!

Newsboys is partnering with Focus on the Family for the third year to help increase awareness of "Bring Your Bible to School Day." Like last year, individuals who sign up to participate will have a chance to win a free trip for four to a Newsboys concert and meet the band in person.

Sadie Robertson is also helping promote the event, saying "I think that's so important in making that stance to hold [the Bible] right in front of you and walk in the school building—it's absolutely amazing."

Finally, Christian legal group Alliance Defending Freedom, which recently won a big religious liberty case at the Supreme Court, is again partnering with Focus on the Family to offer students free legal representation if their rights are violated at school.

Sharing an important message

Focus on the Family may sponsor the event – but it's children and teens like Lettie, 13, from Virginia, who lead it. "We put posters around the school and on our lockers a few weeks before Bring Your Bible to School Day. Some of us didn't wait till that day. We brought our Bibles every day when we learned about it," Lettie shared. "We have also started praying at lunch. I never knew that we were allowed to do that. My friends and I wanted to do it to share the Bible with each other and talk to others who don't know about Jesus!"

Students can sign up to participate and get free, downloadable guides. Elementary, teen and pastor/parent editions are also available.

Students can also follow "Bring Your Bible to School Day" on Facebook, Twitter and Instagram and find more information, including the official video and stories from students and parents, at www.bringyourbible.org. The official hashtag is #BringYourBible.

What Makes Perspectives Different?

Christians today have been blessed by many amazing bible studies and courses on Christianity. But with so many options to choose from, people often ask, "What makes Perspectives so different?"

- 1. 15 Different Instructors: The most unique aspect of the course is the diversity and quality of our instructors. Class schedules include a lineup of Biblical scholars, missionaries, pastors, professors, and mobilizers who bring a wealth of experience and passion to each lesson. Some are flown in and some are local. You just may meet a businessman who's using his company to bless an impoverished African country, a pastor from a local church, or a missionary fresh back from Timbuktu (that actually is a city in North Africa!).
- 2. Material: Unlike bible studies that dive 26 feet deep into a single book of The Bible, Perspectives takes students on an intense faith journey of learning about God's Global Redemptive Story from Genesis to the prophets, Jesus to the early church, and Constantine to today. Furthermore, the course helps participants learn "how" they can join God in His amazing and active work in the world today. The curriculum of Perspectives goes through 4 Perspectives (i.e. Biblical, Historical, Cultural and Strategic) of fulfilling the Great Commission. The Perspectives Reader (included with the course) is a collection of the best articles by a wide variety of Biblical scholars, historians, missiologists, and practitioners and is the number one reader used in seminary classes on missions today.
- 3. Format: Perspectives classes meet for 3 hours, 1 night a week for 15 weeks. The meetings consist of a time of worship, prayer, class activities and instructor teaching. Students can take the course at 3 different levels including: College Credit, Certificate Level and Key Reading and the differences between each are associated with the amount of reading, personal responses and homework. An integrative project is provided for the Certificate and College Credit Levels. Regardless of the level for which you register, alumni regularly comment that taking Perspectives at any level is a life transforming experience.
- 4. MultiDenominational: Often times Christians are involved in bible studies primarily limited to their own, Sunday school class, church or even their Christian denomination. However, Perspectives is open to multi denominations of believers who follow Jesus Christ and the teaching of His Word. As a result, the dynamics of the multi denominations of believers learning side by side creates a dynamic experience which cuts through otherwise common denominational barriers and broadens the perspective and learning experience of the students.
- 5. Transformation: A testimony given exclusively to the movement of the Holy Spirit is the life transformation that is happening inside of the hearts of the students who participate in Perspectives. While the primary purpose of Perspectives is not to train students to become long term overseas missionaries, the Perspectives movement in north Louisiana has witnessed that occurrence in several students. On a larger scale however, a significant transformation has come in the form of students understanding the many ways they can be involved in the Global Christian Movement and then obeying by joining God in His work today.

Registration Night is January 9, 2018 at 6:00p.m. at LSUS BCM. The course begins January 16, 2018 from 6:00-8:30 p.m.

Go to www.perspectives.org to register or contact Lance Webb at 318.455.2460 for questions. Lessons 1 & 2 are free of charge.

LOUISIANA BOOK FESTIVAL RETURNS FOR ITS 14TH YEAR Lt. Governor and State Librarian Announce Festival Highlights

BATON ROUGE—(September 18, 2017)—The annual free Louisiana Book Festival returns on Saturday, October 28th to Downtown Baton Rouge's Capitol Park. Featuring more than 250 authors and panelists discussing their books and more than 100 programs, the 2017 festival includes the Young Readers Pavilion, where children and parents can enjoy storytelling, book-related crafts, and performances; Teen HQ, featuring bestselling and award-winning young adult authors and activities; live musical performances; cooking demos; scores of author and panel book talks and signings; and a wide variety of book-related activities and exhibitors.

"The Louisiana Book Festival, while one of the over 400 festivals we have every year, is one of our most popular," said Lt. Governor Billy Nungesser. "I look forward to the festival every year as it celebrates literary works of authors from around the state, nation, and world. I know of two authors coming from England and one from the Netherlands just to participate in our festival."

Lt. Governor Billy Nungesser and State Librarian Rebecca Hamilton kick off the festival with the presentation of the Louisiana Writer Award to children's author Johnette Downing. Former Louisiana Writer award winners William Joyce, Tim Gautreaux, and Darrell Bourque will be in attendance, along with NYT bestselling Oprah-acclaimed author Wally Lamb; Newbery Medal and Margaret A. Edwards Award recipient Richard Peck; Baton Rouge's own M.O. Walsh, in conversation with Big Fish author Daniel Wallace discussing his latest book; Crystal Wilkinson with her Ernest J. Gaines Award winning book; former Governor of Louisiana and presidential candidate, Buddy Roemer; WWNO Music Inside Out host Gwen Thompkins with BBC jazz radio presenter Alyn Shipton; and Louisiana Poet Laureate Jack Bedell, just to name a few of the notable Louisiana, national, and international authors presenting this year. The festival will also feature MasterChef Season 7 winner Shaun O'Neale, and punk rock icon and former frontman of Black Flag, Keith Morris.

Pre-festival events on Friday, October 27th include half-day WordShops, which offer opportunities for aspiring writers of all levels to work in an intimate setting with renowned Southern authors. This year, Mississippi's poet laureate Beth Ann Fennelly, William C. Morris Award winner Jeff Zentner, award-winning author Michael Farris Smith, and New York Times bestselling author Joshilyn Jackson are leading writing workshops; and Pulpwood Queen Kathy L. Murphy will be leading a workshop on book promotion.

Tickets are available for the Authors Party, held Friday evening in the State Library, where attendees will enjoy drinks, Louisiana cuisine, live music, and the chance to mingle with the Louisiana Book Festival authors. Ticket sales serve as a donation to the Louisiana Library and Book Festival Foundation.

Local artist Keith Morris's "Capitol Grocery," a painting inspired by Baton Rouge's beloved Spanish Town Market and depicting folks gathering for reading and conversation, has been chosen as the official artwork for the festival. The artwork will be used in Louisiana Book Festival promotional material, including the cover of the festival program, t-shirts, book bags, and posters, one of which will be signed by festival authors and participants and hung, along with the original painting, at the State Library of Louisiana.

For more information on events, registering for WordShops, purchasing tickets for the Authors Party, or on volunteering for the festival, please visit www.louisianabookfestival.org.

Shreveport-Bossier Rescue Mission announces the formal retirement of Rev. Henry Martin

After 29 years of service at the Shreveport-Bossier Rescue Mission, Rev. Henry Martin has retired from his position of Community Ambassador.

For over 28 years, Rev. Martin served as Executive Director of the Mission and during his last year at the Mission, he served as the Community Ambassador. During his tenure as Executive Director, the Mission grew from a small men's shelter on Texas Avenue to its current shelter for men, women and children on McNeil Street.

"On behalf of the board, staff and guests, we want to thank Rev. Martin for his years of service," says current Executive Director Pastor Larry Otwell. "For 62 years, the Mission has been a beacon of hope to the hurting and homeless in our community. We have a dream at the Mission to change our cities one life at a time. I am honored that God has given me the opportunity to expand upon the dreams of the leaders before me and lead the Mission into its next chapter."

As a leader in this community, Rev. Martin left a tremendous legacy at the Mission. The best way to honor someone's legacy is to continue their work. The Mission welcomes our community to come together and honor Rev. Martin by volunteering at the Mission. For more information on volunteering, please call 227-2868 ext. 104.

Introducing The Stylewell!

We are so excited to announce the official launch of our new hair salon, The Stylewell inside The Lovewell Center! Through the vision of our awesome volunteer, Shelby Horton, we have created a space for our Lovewell Members to come and receive professional haircuts.

While getting a haircut can often seem like another task to add to our to-do list, it is a necessity that many individuals in poverty do not always have the ability to afford. Personal hygiene can be the difference in someone feeling dignity, worth, and confidence!

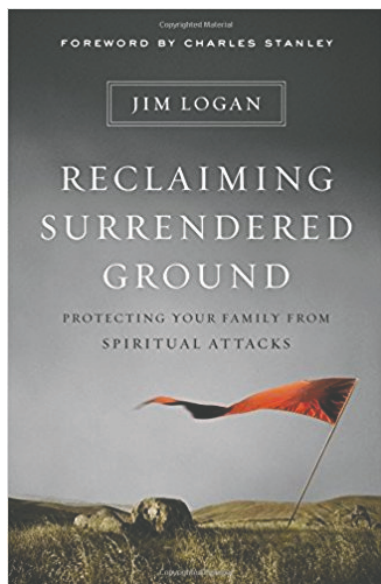

We currently have been opening up the Stylewell once a month but would love to be able to open once a week! In order to do this, we NEED MORE HAIR STYLISTS!!

If you are a professional hairstylist that would like to volunteer your time, please email our Stylewell Volunteer, Shelby Horton at shelbyhorton423@gmail.com!

RECLAIMING SURRENDERED GROUND: PROTECTING YOUR FAMILY FROM SPIRITUAL ATTACKS

BY JIM LOGAN - FOREWORD BY CHARLES STANLEY

...“Dr. Logan is a veteran of many years in the battle, and he has helped thousands of people to find new freedom and lasting victory in Christ. His book shows step by step how you or someone you love can reclaim the ground the enemy has gained in your life, even if Satan is well-entrenched on that ground inside his strongholds. The weapons Christ gives us are able to tear down Satan’s strongholds and replace them with fortresses of truth. Reclaiming Surrendered Ground is a much needed book, and I pray that God will open your spiritual eyes and ears to His truth as you read.” Charles Stanley, Pastor of First Baptist Church, Atlanta.

“The Kindness Challenge”

Excerpts from the August 31, 2017 interview with Shaunti Feldhahn

Nancy DeMoss Wolgemuth: Well, I’ve been so looking forward to having this conversation.

This morning in my quiet time, I came to this verse in Proverbs 21:21. “Whoever pursues righteousness and kindness will find life, righteousness, and honor.”

Pursue—you have to pursue it. It says to me this is something worth pursuing, that you’re going to be the beneficiary by pursuing kindness. And that’s exactly what you have found in your research that led to this book, The Kindness Challenge.

I hope our listeners take advantage of a chance to get this book, which will give a lot more handles on how to do this. But, just remind us of the three parts of The Kindness Challenge for those who are wanting to do that.

Shaunti: What you do is you pick one person that you want a better relationship with. It could be your spouse. You don’t even have to have a difficult relationship; you just might want to make it better. But if it is difficult, this will be a good starting point. Maybe it’s your child, or your step-father. Whoever, for thirty days, just do three things:

First, you say nothing negative to that person, either to them or about them to somebody else. I know your listeners are so familiar with this because of the *Husband Encouragement Challenge you’ve been issuing for years. So that’s the first thing—to say nothing negative to them or about them.

The second thing, every day for thirty days, is to find one thing you can sincerely praise or affirm, and you tell them, and you tell somebody else. So you’re basically focusing not on what’s worthy of driving you crazy, but you’re focusing on what’s worthy of praise.

Nancy: I’m thinking of Ephesians 4 that talks about those of us who are in Christ. There’s things we’re supposed to put off and things we’re supposed to put on in their place. So if you just put off the negativity, but don’t replace it with proactive praise and encouragement, you’re missing part of the equation.

Shaunti: Exactly. The other thing you’re supposed to put on, and the other thing you do for thirty days, the third thing, is—take some action of generosity, of kindness toward this person—just a little day-to-day kind of thing. Those are very simple steps for thirty days, and yet we found that 89% of relationships improved.

Nancy: And I would think that some of those relationships improved a lot.

Shaunti: A lot. Yes! This was usually one-sided because they didn’t want the other person to discount what they were trying to do. It’s not 100%, but 89% of the time it softens the other person’s heart. It changes you and how you feel about the other person. So that negative stuff could still be there, but suddenly you see all this stuff that is worthy of praise that you didn’t see before.

Nancy: I’m thinking about Titus 3 and how this is such a picture of God’s love and His kindness toward us. We need to preach the gospel to ourselves and realize, “I did not deserve God to be kind to me.” He did it anyway. And that’s what is changing my life. Well then, as God’s people, how can we not extend that to others?

Shaunti: It really is all about pride.

Nancy: You’re saying we need to practice positive praise and encouragement. Good night. We want that and sometimes we feel starved for that, but we aren’t as quick to see the need to give it to others.

Shaunti: I drove into the driveway, and my husband, Jeff, had gotten home before me, and he got sort of a desire—“Oh, I’m home early, so I’ll just mow the lawn...He was so excited because: A) He got to make the lawn look nice, and B) He’s like a little kid who’s wanting to make his mom happy. Most men, inside, they just want to please their wives.

Shaunti: So I drive into the driveway, and I think, Wow, that looks really nice! Now, it’s 10:00 at night, we’re lying in bed, and Jeff says just out of the blue, “So, um, did you notice anything today?” Oh, my word! The lawn! ... I noticed that he’d done it. I just didn’t say it. Ladies, two words have the power to transform your relationship with your husband; they’re thank you.

Nancy: Can I just stop and say our engineer who is helping us, our male engineer, is nodding his head vociferously. (Laughing) So we have a man’s testimony here!

Shaunti: If you say, “Thank you,” in the little day-to-day things of life, here’s what it says: “I noticed what you did, and it was good! And I appreciate it.”

Nancy: And, “I appreciate you!”

Shaunti: Yes! “And what you do for me.” We want him to come up to us at the kitchen sink, put his arm around us and say, “I’m so glad I married you...If he says, “Thanks for putting the dishes in the dishwasher.” It’s, like, nice, but it doesn’t speak to us. If we come up to him at the kitchen sink and say, “Thanks so much for putting the dishes in the dishwasher.” It speaks to every little particle of his being. And if we say, “I love you. I’m so glad I married you,” he’s, like, “Thanks, that’s nice.”

I’ve had several men say, “You know, we’re all those little boys inside...I really want her to appreciate and go, ‘Look what you did!’ As women we don’t realize that when we say, “Oh, thanks for mowing the lawn, but you missed a spot.”

Nancy: It’s not blessed.

Shaunti: If it’s worth hurting their feelings today, then, okay. So be it. Just know that you’re hurting their feelings, as opposed to being completely clueless about it. If it’s at all possible, say it the next day. - My son, loading the dishwasher, stacking things on top of each other. The next day, because he’s going to do that over and over, I’ll say, “Oh, Buddy, before you start...See how the jets of the water go this way? So, if you stack them this way, it will clean both of them.”

“Oh. Okay. Thanks, Mom.”

Nancy: Then you haven’t wounded him in the process.

Shaunti: Yes, and without realizing it...I can guarantee there are some women who are rolling their eyes and thinking, Oh, please. Get over it, guys. If that’s you, realize that if it’s true God made us different, different things will hurt the other person than would hurt you, and it’s a legitimate hurt. You have an opportunity to build up instead of tear down.

Nancy: And that’s the way of love. To say, “That person is not like me, and that’s okay.”

Shaunti: Yes

Nancy: Some have experienced deep betrayal, especially in marriage, and they’re thinking, I don’t know how I can praise this person, I have been so wounded.

Shaunti: People who had decided to make a one-sided effort in The 30-Day Kindness Challenge had been hurt, but they did not want to let it be the end of the story.

Nancy: They were returning good for evil.

Shaunti: Exactly. They knew they had a chance to do what God had asked them to do whether the other person responded at all, but they could stand before the Lord and say, “I know that I did what You asked me to do.”

BreakPoint: Where Is God in the Storms? Christ and the Problem of Natural Evil

by: John Stonestreet & G. Shane Morris
www.breakpoint.org

With so much devastation in the news, it's hard not to ask God, "Why?" Here's some help for responding to questions about natural disasters and God.

Hurricane Harvey, Hurricane Irma, a massive earthquake in Mexico, wildfires across the western United States. The string of natural disasters in the last few weeks has left many wondering: Where is God in the midst of all this suffering, loss of life, and destruction?

It's a question nearly as old as time. As the Greek philosopher, Epicurus asked, Is God able to stop suffering but not willing? Then He isn't all-good. Is He willing, but not able? Then He isn't all-powerful. In both cases, He's not really God.

And Voltaire, the French philosopher, famously argued in a poem that the All Saints Day Earthquake in Lisbon in 1755 made believing in an all-good, all-powerful God untenable.

Thankfully, many Christians have tackled this tough question. In fact, Colson Center Senior Fellow, J. Warner Wallace offers a few of his thoughts in an upcoming column at BreakPoint.org.

First, Wallace points out that "natural disasters" aren't always entirely, well, natural. Human freedom and planning leads to homes and cities being built in places susceptible to earthquakes, floods, and volcanic eruptions. Sometimes corners are cut on building materials or construction in order to save money. These choices can put people in harm's way when nature turns dangerous.

And second, calamity often reveals the very best of human character, as opportunities abound to love those in need. In the early centuries of Christianity, pagan hearts were softened toward the Gospel when Christians ran toward great plagues and disasters, rather than away. In the same way, as we've told you on BreakPoint, Christians today provide the bulk of relief in the wake of the recent hurricanes. These disasters are terrible, but the displays of neighborly love are beautiful.

And finally, our visceral reaction to the tragedy and suffering caused by natural disasters, far from disproving an all-powerful, all-loving God, is actually strong evidence for His existence. C. S. Lewis admitted in "Mere Christianity" that as an atheist, he thought the injustice in the world was an airtight argument against Christianity. But then he wondered: "How had I gotten this idea of just and unjust?"

His argument depended on evil and suffering being objectively bad, not just inconvenient. But if we're merely subatomic particles, then no arrangement of those particles can be morally better or worse than any other. Our hearts cry out that this world is not the way it's supposed to be. And atheism can only reply, "Sure it is."

But we know better. The world is broken. It's not functioning according to God's original design, and Christianity places the blame on humanity's rebellion against the Creator.

But the Christian message doesn't end there. God assures us that He's with us in the hurricanes, floods, earthquakes, and fires. In Jesus Christ, He entered the world's brokenness and joined our suffering, crying out with a very human heart as He Himself tasted death on our behalf: "My God, my God, why have you forsaken me?" The question that Jesus asked here points to the only answer to Epicurus' question, because Jesus is the only God Who is all-good, all-loving, and knows what it means to feel the brunt of evil and suffering.

As Edward Shillito wrote in his poem, "Jesus of the Scars":

*The other gods were strong; but Thou wast weak;
They rode, but Thou didst stumble to a throne;
But to our wounds only God's wounds can speak,
And not a god has wounds, but Thou alone.*

*Remember that the Suffering Savior is now the enthroned King.
Suffering and death do not have the last word.
Sin is a defeated foe. All will be made new again.*

And so, in light of that Truth, or better yet because of the One who is Truth, we can give our best answer to the question of suffering by following the example of our Savior, and His Church throughout history, by running toward the disasters with love, with help, with grace, and with the Gospel.

In the midst of disaster, destruction, and suffering, believers have the example of Jesus Christ. He identifies with our suffering, and we can trust Him never to leave us or forsake us.

It Takes More than Five Minutes

The woman was clearly distressed as she told Gospel for Asia-supported pastor about her son, Daruka. At 24 years old, he was overcome with depression. He wouldn't leave his room. He wouldn't talk to anyone, or eat. His mother, a Christian, asked Pastor Jaisukh to visit her home and pray for her son.

When Jaisukh visited, God moved in Daruka's heart, and he shared his troubles with him. When asked why he was depressed, Daruka told him how he had compared his life with his friends' and realized he had nothing. He said he had contemplated ending his life.

Pastor Jaisukh gently told him about the value of life, encouraged him to find hope and offered some practical advice: Spend some time in prayer with Jesus every morning and night.

Daruka tried what the pastor suggested. When he met him again a few days later, he said, "That day I had spent five minutes in prayer . . . but I am the same." Pastor Jaisukh asked him how many times he had prayed, and Daruka admitted it was only once. The pastor smiled and invited Daruka to pray with him, and they did—for an hour. The next day they again spent an hour in prayer together. And the next day. And the next.

As Daruka spent time on his knees with another sinful man before the Throne of Grace, Jesus worked peace deep into his heart. After a month of daily prayer, Daruka was a new man. He found strength to keep living. Daruka told his parents and brothers about the depth of life he had found and started leading them in times of prayer as well.
