HB 707: THE LOUISIANA MARRIAGE & CONSCIENCE ACT

State Rep Mike Johnson

What is the purpose of the Act?

HB 707 is designed to prevent adverse treatment by the State of any person or entity simply because they have a sincerely held belief in the traditional definition of marriage.

Why is this necessary?

Leading legal scholars concur that conflicts between religious liberty and changing ideas about the institution of marriage are real and should be addressed by legislation. As the President stated in 2013, "On an issue as sensitive as this, knowing that Americans hold a wide range of views based on deeply held beliefs, maintaining our nation's commitment to religious freedom is also vital." To maintain that vital commitment, the Legislature should ensure that our fundamental right of conscience is always protected against government intrusion and coercion.

What protections will the Act provide?

The Act will prevent the State from denying or withholding from a person or entity such things that they would otherwise be entitled to - eg, a license, certification, accreditation, or state benefits - simply because the person or entity acts in accordance with a religious belief or moral conviction that marriage is or should be recognized as the union of one man and one woman.

Can't this wait until a future session?

Some have suggested that because the 2015 Regular Session of the Louisiana Legislature must deal primarily with the massive budget crisis and other pressing matters in our state that we should delay consideration of the Marriage and Conscience Act until a future session. But the defense of liberty must always be of paramount importance, and challenges to our fundamental freedoms must be met and addressed as they emerge -- and not at some more "convenient" time down the road. Liberty is never easy to defend, but it is always worth the cost.

Does this Act cover the provision of goods and services by business owners?

Because this Act is designed to prevent the adverse treatment of all persons by the State, the Act has no application to private business owners and their provisions of goods and services. This new law will simply prohibit discrimination by the government against any person on the basis of their sincerely held beliefs that marriage is or should be recognized as the union of one man and one woman (a view that has been held by all cultures throughout the world for five millennia of human history). Nothing in the bill creates any right of discrimination between private persons.

Why is there so much confusion about such a simple bill?

Activist organizations like the ACLU and Forum for Equality are intentionally engaging in a campaign of fear, intimidation and misinformation about HB 707. Instead of a civil dialogue and respectful debate on the issues, these organizations are working hard to obscure the facts, subvert the letter and spirit of the bill, and personally attack state leaders who revere religious freedom and support this Act.

Protecting religious freedom from government intrusion is a state interest of the highest order. No state should have the right to penalize a person, charity, or a family-owned business, simply because of what they believe. In fact, America was founded on the now controversial idea that people should be protected against this type of government intrusion and coercion. Supporters of HB 707 respect the rights of all people to believe whatever they wish about marriage, and we ask only that such respect be reciprocated. Regardless of our individual beliefs, every citizen should recognize the right of our neighbors to hold a different view -- and all of us should agree that we don't want the government to be allowed to discriminate against us, or our neighbor, simply because of what we believe.

HB 707 will provide a shield for people of faith, and a sword to no one

PROTECTING YOUR MINISTRY

— Supplied by Alliance Defending

Freedom, this is a comprehensive handbook meant for all types of churches, Christian schools and Christian ministries. If you desire that your ministry remain a compassionate but faithful witness to God's truth in our world today, a thoughtful consideration of the information in this book could spare you some of what other brothers and sisters in Christ have already been through.

Suggested Church By-Law Revisions — Offered by Freedom Guard, this is suggested revisions and modifications of church by-laws in the midst of churches across the country being advised to review and amend their governing documents today in the wake of ongoing battles over same-sex "marriage," overbroad "hate crimes" legislation, and relentless legal challenges to the fundamental rights of conscience and the free exercise of religion. While no church in Louisiana is required to maintain bylaws, such a document can be very helpful in clarifying and codifying more policies, procedures and matters of doctrine, etc., than are normally contained in a church's articles of incorporation. The articulation of these positions is particularly important today as a means of protecting biblical conviction on the subject of marriage and human sexuality.

That's a Fact, Jack Moral Truth vs. Opinion

By John Stonestreet - BreakPoint Commentary

We are raising a generation of relativists, a college professor recently wrote in the New York Times. Why this is not a very good plan...

Already this year, we've seen a lot of evil: suicide bombings, the attacks in Paris, religious persecution, Boko Haram and ISIS. These have all outraged the world—and rightly so. But here's a question worth pondering: Will our kids be able to recognize evil when they see it? Do they even believe in moral facts?

Well, that's the question one educator asked recently in The New York Times after making a surprising discovery about what his child was learning in school.

Justin McBrayer, an associate professor of ethics at Fort Lewis College, says he couldn't figure out why the high school graduates showing up in his classroom had no concept of moral truth. The overwhelming majority of freshmen, he says, "view[ed] moral claims as mere opinions that are not true," or are true only in a relative sense.

McBrayer was puzzled about this until he visited a school open house with his second-grade son. It was there that he encountered a pair of signs hanging prominently in the classroom. The first read, "Fact: Something that is true about a subject and can be tested or proven." The next one said, "Opinion: What someone thinks, feels, or believes."

Startled by this oversimplification, McBrayer was sure it must be a fluke. So he went home and Googled "fact vs. opinion." And sure enough, he found lesson plans from educators around the country that alarmed him. "...students are taught that claims are either facts or opinions," McBrayer writes. "They are given quizzes in which they must sort out claims into one camp or the other but not both."

The problem with this, he explains, is that many claims don't fit nicely into either category. Many claims are both facts and opinions, because opinions, of course, can be true or false. And he decided to test whether his son understood this.

"I believe that George Washington was the first president," he said to him. "Is that a fact or an opinion?" And the second-grader's blank expression when the statement didn't fit his categories, McBrayer writes, said it all.

But it gets even worse. A little digging reveals that public schools today teach, as a matter of course, that all value claims are opinions, not facts. One grade-school worksheet, for example, categorized the statements "copying homework is wrong," "cursing in school is inappropriate," and "all men are created equal," as opinions—not facts.

"This is repeated ad nauseum," McBrayer writes. "[A]ny claim with good or right or wrong, etc. is not a fact."

But if value statements are always opinions, why should anyone believe them? For that matter, why should kids believe a teacher who tells them that hitting is wrong? Or a college ethics professor who tells them murder is wrong?

It's a problem that's not restricted to second-grade classrooms. As Jamie Condliff writes at Gizmodo, researchers at Google have reportedly pioneered a new algorithm that ranks Web pages by how well their claims stack up against a library of established so-called "facts." That library, known as Google's "Knowledge Vault," is programmed to sort claims into facts and opinions—just like McBrayer's son.

"If web pages contain information that contradicts the Vault," writes Condliff, "they slide down in the ranking."

Unlike Common Core standards, Google's system hasn't been implemented yet. But if it is, our world's most sought after source of information will be silencing dissent on controversial topics, like origins, climate change, and sexuality.

Now we need to know all of this not so we can panic, but so that we can counteract the false dichotomy so many of our kids are learning. There are moral facts. And if you need some help on how to approach this with your teenager or college age student—send them to a Summit Ministries' summer worldview conference. It's simply the best apologetics and worldview training program out there for students. Visit Summit.org to learn more.

And to see an excellent talk on moral truth by my friend Sean McDowell, come to BreakPoint.org and click on this commentary. It's called, "Is There Truth, a Moral Law that We Can All Know?" and it's terrific.

THE TALENTS CHALLENGE

The "Talents Challenge" is taken from the Parable of the Talents that Jesus shared in Matthew 25:14-30. In that parable we are reminded that God has given all of us spiritual and natural resources to use for His kingdom. We are challenged to use the resources and creativity God has imparted to us to gain more souls for the Lord. Will you do that?

The challenge is simple - Will you spend $100 to fund your own gospel outreach in your community?
It's called a "micro-outreach" because it involves about 1-5 people with a budget of about $100.

Before you think, "Oh great, another annoying Facebook challenge!" let us explain. Don't challenge people on Facebook to do this – YOU do it. Only use social media to inspire others indirectly through photos and testimonies of what the Lord did

Franklin Graham Announces 50-State 'Decision America Tour' in 2016

Staff/National Religious Broadcasters

Franklin Graham plans to embark on a 50 state tour of the U.S. in 2016 to hold prayer rallies, to share the message of Jesus, and to challenge Christians to boldly live out their faith.

"America is in trouble. At 62 years of age, I've lived long enough to learn that neither the Democrats nor the Republicans can turn this country around," shared Graham on his Facebook page. "No political party or politician is the answer. The only hope for this country is Almighty God and His Son Jesus Christ."

The "Decision America Tour" will take the Gospel from Alaska to Alabama, as Graham calls on Christians to pray for the nation and its leaders, vote for candidates who will uphold biblical values, and run for public office at every level – local, state, and federal.

"We will not be endorsing any political candidates, but I will be proclaiming the truth of God's Gospel in every state," Graham clarified.

The evangelist said more details on the tour will come at a later time. In the meantime, Graham is asking believers to pray for him and for the upcoming tour.

"I hope you will start praying with us now," he concluded.

In addition to serving as President & CEO of the Billy Graham Evangelistic Association, Graham serves as President & CEO of Samaritan's Purse.

A Personal Prayer Journey

Danny Cahill

Can You Relate?

This morning, I woke up and began reading an article. It talked about two people who knew the same person in different ways. Two different people can know someone in completely different ways and on completely different levels. The article sounded as though they were talking about a different man! This opened my eyes to something that I'd like to share.

While in the airport, I sat next to a man named Joe who was stressed out about something. When I asked where he was going, he replied, "Paris, then Austria." I replied, "What have you got to be stressed about! That sounds fun!" Then he said, "I've been worried about leaving everything for two weeks. But this is going to be fun. My brothers and I are going with my mother. When she got cancer, her bucket-list included this trip."

"Wow! I'm sorry, but it's great that you are going to get to do this with her!"

He went on, "Crazy thing is that she's in remission now, so it's a kind of bucket-list/celebratory trip."

Seek, and ye shall relate

I talked to Joe about my father's death 3 years ago. After he died, we found a book he was filling out for my son. My sisters and I were in tears! It was as though he was speaking from the grave. What I got most from the book was how little I knew about my father! I got to spend more time with him than anyone but my mother. Still there was so much that I never asked him! I urged Joe, "Don't take this time for granted! Ask your mother everything you can. Get to know her! Spending time is a great way to get to know her, but really seeking out those things you don't know about her is important to knowing who she really is!"

Joe said he'd do that and we parted ways. I thought I knew what that verse meant. You know the one: "Seek and ye shall find." (Matt 7:7) I used to equate it only with asking what you wanted or needed from God. I see it from a new perspective after talking to Joe.

Yesterday was my father's birthday. He would have been 71 years old. For 20 years, we worked together, we fished and hunted together, he coached my teams, and we lived together for most of that time. Yet I knew so little about him. Why?

I now think I was so obsessed with sharing my feelings with him that I hardly ever paused to hear his. I always told him what I wanted or needed, but never asked him what he wanted or needed. I spent so much time talking and so little time seeking that I missed so much about knowing my father's heart.

Relationship is all about seeking

In my walk with God, I've spent a lot of time in prayer with Him. But unfortunately, most of that prayer was about what I wanted – what I needed. Doing this is an important part of relationship, but I've been missing out on what is really important in my walk with God: knowing His heart, His wants and His needs. You see, I've been missing out on the best part of our relationship – my knowing of just who He is.

I know he is my Father. I know He has my best interests at heart. I know that He created me for His purpose. So why wouldn't I seek exactly who He is?

If I know more about God, I'll surely know more about what His purpose for me is, right? If I know more about God, I'll trust that he has my best interests at heart, right? If I know more of just who God is, I won't have to wait until we meet face to face to see what he has in store for me. And I don't want to miss it. I don't want to lose an opportunity. I want to seek, I want to find, and I want to know; to know God's heart is the key. And to know God's heart will take one thing and one thing only: to seek; to ask; to have an honest and open relationship with Him.

True relationship is two-way, not one-way. I think I'm going to focus a little more on seeking what I can find out about this wonderful, all powerful being that created me in His image to do something that no one else on earth was called here to do. And I believe if I truly do that, the direction of my life will be forever changed in a direction towards God's will for me, and not towards my will for my life.

Look out God – here I come!

Since winning "The Biggest Loser," Danny has appeared on numerous national television programs, spoken at over 150 major events for Fortune 500 Companies, community and church events. He also was a speaker last year in Washington, DC at the National Day of Prayer. For more information about him visit www.thedannycahill.com or email him at danny@thedannycahill.com.

When I die, will I go to HEAVEN?

God wants us to.

God so loved the world that He gave His one and only Son, that whoever believes in Him shall not perish but have eternal life. John 3:16

Our problem is that we have willfully chosen to disobey God (it is called sin). All have sinned and fall short of the glory of God. Romans 3:23

Though we deserve to be punished for our sins and separated from God, He provided a way for us to be forgiven and changed. The wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life in Christ Jesus our Lord. Romans 6:23

PROMISE KEEPERS - BATON ROUGE, LA HPC ARENA | JUNE 05 - 06, 2015

Promise Keepers is a catalytic event for men, challenging them to embrace their calling to lead their families, churches, and communities in worship of, and obedience to, Jesus the Messiah. Through powerful worship and anointed preaching, men are called out to become everything that God has created them to be, and then to return to their families, churches, and communities with a commitment to hear and obey God's Word in the power of the Holy Spirit.

To register visit <https://promisekeepers.org/>

As a result of the generosity of the church community in Baton Rouge, Promise Keepers is offering $10 tickets to the Baton Rouge Conference! PK is coming to Dallas August 14-15
